Ah, the "Holiday weekends are for other people" syndrome.

sympathy I'd send chocolate if I could...

At this rate, I might as well work retail. At least I could get ten percent off on shoes...

You know, I know it's not what it says, but I keep on reading it as "Firefox has located your life..."

Impossible. Firefox doesn't work miracles. I don't have one of those.

So are you the fox or the rodent in this picture? ;-)

I might even let you borrow it sometimes. That is, if I were to have one.

Oh, she's not so bad. That space alien in the cape has turned her head, is all.

When I decided to be born in February, I must not have realized I'd own a motorcycle. Winter storms play hell with...

Is this conversation grounds for workplace harassment? Not my half of it, of course.

Aww. Maybe the Coyote can help you catch some?

(Did you ever see the movie -- I think it was "Never Cry Wolf," based off the Farley Mowatt book, where the main character, who's living with wolves, realizes that they seem to mostly eat mice and can't believe they could get enough calories that way, so he tries it? I'm thinking of that now. You must be /really/ hungry if you're resorting to mice. Also, I thought Wabbits were herbivores? ;-)

If, right after this picture was taken, both fox and mouse plunge off the side of a cliff, that's about my life right now. Three hard drives dead in the space of a month. (In a RAID array, thankfully, so I haven't lost any data... yet. And the most important stuff is backed up elsewhere, in duplicate, thank goodness. But aaaargh.)

Oh, yeah. Wabbit's Law #18: No piece of hardware will hit the wall all by itself. Electronic misery loves company. >:+P

The only surprise is how long it took to arrive. We were painting on these cave walls with ASCII art since the day we moved in...
